

Southern Campaign American Revolution Pension Statements & Rosters

Bounty Land Warrant information relating to Andrew Wallace BLWt543-300 fn¹ Transcribed by Will Graves 7/27/11

I was well acquainted with Captain Adam Wallace, Captain Andrew Wallace and Lieutenant James Wallace, formerly of the Virginia Line on Continental establishment — they were Brothers and all died in the Service of the United States. Adam belonged to the 7th Regiment and was killed at Buford's Defeat [defeat of Col. Abraham Buford at the Battle of Waxhaws SC, 29 May 1780]. Andrew and James were in the 12th Regiment under my Command, the former was killed at the Battle of Guilford [Guilford Courthouse NC, 15 Mar 1781], and the latter died at an Hospital.

Given under my hand at Richmond this 20th day of December 1810.

S/ James Wood formerly B. Gen'l. Cont'l. Army

I was well acquainted with Captain Adam Wallace, Captain Andrew Wallace and Lieutenant James Wallace, formerly of the Virginia Line on Continental establishment — they were Brothers and all died in the Service of the United States. Adam belonged to the 7th Regiment and was killed at Buford's Defeat. Andrew and James were in the 12th Regiment under my Command, the former was killed at the Battle of Guilford, and the latter died at an Hospital.

Given under my hand at Richmond his 20th day of Decembre 1810.

James Wood. formerly B. Genl. Cont'l. Army.

I was personally acquainted with Capt. Adam Wallace of the 7th, Captain Andrew Wallace and Lieut. James Wallace of the 12th Virg'a. Reg't. on Continental establishment. I was present at the death of the first named Gent'n. he was killed in action in the Waxhaw settlement So. Carolina commonly called Buford's defeat. In the early part of my service I served in the same Regiment with Captain Andrew & Lieut. James Wallace, the former was killed in the Battle of ¹ The papers relating to this veteran's bounty land warrant are located in the file of Adam Wallace BLWt542-300 which was transcribed by C. Leon Harris.

Guilford & the latter died in the Hospital at Philadelphia of the Smallpox.

Given under my hand at Fincastle Virg'a the 18th of December 1810

S/ Henry Bowyer formerly Capt'n. Virg'a line

I was personally acquainted with Captⁿ - Adam Wallace of the 7th, Captain
- Andrew Wallace & Lieut^t James Wallace of the 12th Virg^a Regt^t, an Continental establishment, I was present at the death of the first named Gent^l, he was killed in action upon the Waxhaw settlement S^c Carolina, commonly called Buford's defeat. In the early part of my service I served in the same Regiment with Captain Andrew & Lieut^t James Wallace, the former was killed in the Battle of Guilford & the latter died in the Hospital at Philadelphia of the Smallpox Given under my hand at Fincastle Virg^a the 18th of December 1810
Henry Bowyer formerly Captⁿ Virg^a line

This day came Wm Bradley [William Bradley] before me in being duly sworn saith that in February 1776 he enlisted under Adam Wallace then a first Lieutenant under Captain Thomas Posey of the 7th Virginia Regiment – that Lieutenant Adam Wallace was promoted to a Captaincy and was killed at Buford's defeat the 29th day of May 1780 – that he this deponent was under his command when he was killed –

That he also knew Andrew Wallace he served as a Lieutenant at Point Pleasant State of Virginia Joined the Continental Army as a Captain in the year 1777 & short time before the Battle of Brandywine he knows only by common report – And the general opinion of his acquaintances that he was killed at the Battle of Guilford –

That he was well acquainted with Mr. James Wallace who was a Lieutenant in Captain Roland Madison's Company Colonel Wood's Regiment, who died of the smallpox in Philadelphia I think it was in May 1777 – he died that day the revolutionary Army marched through Philadelphia – and further saith not.

S/ Wm Bradley

Wm Bradley

This day came W^m Bradley before me and being duly sworn saith that in February 1776 he enlisted under Adams Walker then a first Lieutenant under Capt Tho^s Jones of the 7th Virginia Regiment - that Lt Adams Walker was promoted to a captaincy and was killed at Brandywine about the 26th or 29th day of May 1780 - that he this deponent was under his command when he was killed - that he also knows Adams Walker he served as a Lieutenant at first Sergeant of the 1st Virginia joined the Continental Army as a Captain in the year 1777 a short time before the Battle of Brandywine he knows only by common report - and the general ~~opinion~~ of his acquaintances that he was killed at the Battle of Germantown - that he was well acquainted with Adams Walker who was a Lieutenant in Capt Rowland Masons Company 1st Rhode Regiment. who died of the Small Pox in Philadelphia I think it was in May 1777 - he said that day the Revolutionary Army Marched thro Philadelphia - and further saith not

W^m Bradley

Southern Campaign American Revolution Pension Statements and Rosters

Addendum to Andrew Wallace BLWt543-300

Transcribed and annotated by C. Leon Harris. 27 Dec 2022.

From [bounty-land records in the Library of Virginia indexed as Wallis, Andrew.]

I Do hereby Certify that Captain Andrew Wallis was Promoted to the Rank of Captain in the Continental Army & in the 14th Virginia Regiment the 20th Day of March 1777, that he had served a Considerable time before as a Lieutenant in the Service of the State and was killed at the Battle of Guilford.

Given Under my hand this 22^d of Jun 1784 James Wood Late B. G.

Genuine/ T. Meriwether

A Copy/ H. Randolph